JAMES WATT BICENTENARY 2019

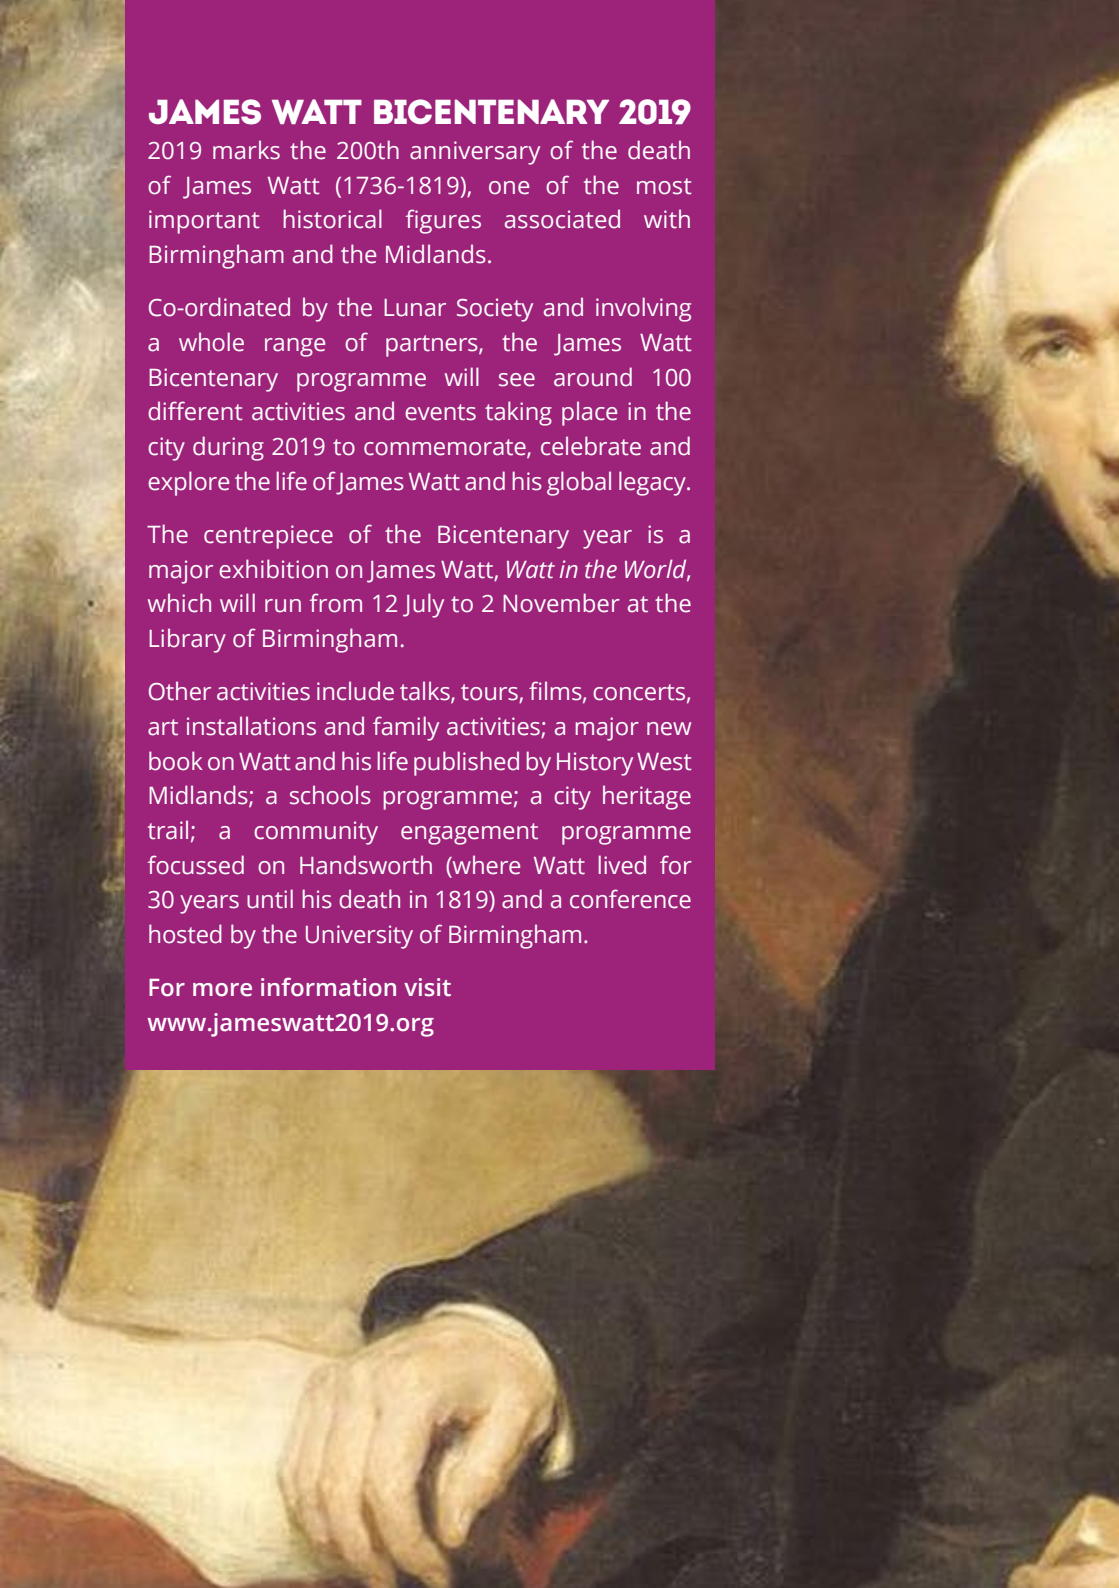

2019 marks the 200th anniversary of the death of James Watt (1736-1819), one of the most important historical figures associated with Birmingham and the Midlands.

Co-ordinated by the Lunar Society and involving a whole range of partners, the James Watt Bicentenary programme will see around 100 different activities and events taking place in the city during 2019 to commemorate, celebrate and explore the life of James Watt and his global legacy.

The centrepiece of the Bicentenary year is a major exhibition on James Watt, Watt in the World, which will run from 12 July to 2 November at the Library of Birmingham.

Other activities include talks, tours, films, concerts, art installations and family activities; a major new book on Watt and his life published by History West Midlands; a schools programme; a city heritage trail; a community engagement programme focussed on Handsworth (where Watt lived for 30 years until his death in 1819) and a conference hosted by the University of Birmingham.
